Read the description written about the Bale eagle. Complete the table given below with the information of the bird.

Bald eagle the only eagle solely native to North America, and the national bird of the United States. The bald eagle is actually a sea eagle that commonly occurs inland along rivers and large lakes. The adult male is about 90 cm long and has a wingspan of 2 metres. Females, which grow somewhat larger than males, may reach 108 cm in length and have a wingspan of 2.5 metres. Both sexes are dark brown, with a white head and tail. The bird is not actually bald; its name derives from the conspicuous appearance of its white-feathered head. The beak, eyes, and feet are yellow. Bald eagles pluck fish out of the water with their talons, and sometimes they follow seabirds as a means of locating fish. Bald eagles also rob ospreys of their fish. Besides live fish, bald eagles also prey on other birds, small mammals, snakes, turtles, and crabs, and they readily eat carrion. Bald eagles may have numbered in the hundreds of thousands when they were declared the American national bird in 1782

Read the following text and answer the questions.

Philip Revatha (Ray) Wijewardene was born in Colombo, Ceylon, on 20 August 1924. He had his primary and secondary education at Ladies' College, Colombo, and St Thomas' College Mount Lavinia. He proceeded to Peterhouse College, Cambridge University, UK, where he studied three branches of engineering -- aeronautical, mechanical and agricultural. He also earned qualifications in business administration from the Harvard Business School, and later received honorary degrees from universities in the UK and Sri Lanka.

With a deep interest for all things mechanical, Ray studied and experimented with both agricultural machinery and aeroplanes. These twin passions were to last a lifetime. He was fond of saying, "Agriculture is my bread and butter, while aviation is the jam on top of it".

In 1955, Ray designed the world's first two-wheeled, hand tractor to help small farmers in the tropics to mechanise their work. It was soon mass produced by Landmaster company in Nottingham, UK. During the 1960s, Ray travelled all over Asia, Africa and Latin America promoting the tractor to farmers and governments.

A turning point came in 1964, when he presented his Landmaster experience to a class in agri-business at the Harvard Business School. Buckminster Fuller, the noted American architect, designer and inventor, asked from the audience: "Did your tractor mechanise tropical farming - or just the buffalo?"

That question triggered a complete reorientation in Ray's thinking. He later acknowledged: "Ultimately, the tractor only mechanised the buffalo, and that too, not very well. It didn't have the reproductive capability of the buffalo! Nor could it produce milk as the buffalo did, or fertilise our fields!"
