Marie Curie

Maria Sklodowska, later known as Marie Curie, was born on November 7, 1867 in Poland. Marie was the youngest of five children. Both her parents were teachers. Her father was a Physics instructor. When she was only 10 her mother died of tuberculosis. As a child, she had a bright and curious mind and excelled at school. Although Marie was a top student in her secondary school, she was not allowed to enter the male-only university of Poland. Therefore, she continued her education in Poland's "floating university", a set of underground informal classes held in secret. Marie dreamed of going abroad to earn an official degree, but she lacked the financial resources to pay for more schooling. For roughly five years, Marie worked as a tutor and a governess. She used her spare time to study; reading about Physics, Chemistry and Mathematics. In 1891, Marie finally made her way to Paris and enrolled at the Sorbonne University. She completed her master's degree in Physics in 1893.
