"Really? Thank you mother", said Kumar gratefully. He was out of the house in a few minutes and headed for his school. However, in school he could not find his friends. "They would have told me a lie.", he thought. When Kumar returned home after a few hours his mother was waiting for him at the front door. To his surprise the garden was spick and span.

Test 15

Read the following passage and answer the questions.

Sumudu sat in the small room he shared with his two brothers. His eyes rested on the walls. The paint was beginning to peel. Is there a way of re-doing them?", he wondered. In the living room his brothers were giggling and shouting. Sumudu shook his head to bring himself out of his daydream. He stared at the blank paper in front of him pondering how he would start the essay about his family relationship.

His mother wouldn't be home for another half an hour, he knew his brothers were anxiously waiting for dinner. So Sumudu went into the kitchen to prepare dinner. With his mother's meagre salary there wasn't much to choose from. The only food in the house was a can of fish, some vegetables, a packet of noodles and half a bag of rice. "I'm hungry", said eight year old Amal. "What do you have for cooking?", he asked grabbing Sumudu around the waist and tickling him. Sumudu responded, "I'm going to cook my famous vegetable fried rice with a potato curry. Want to help me with it?" "I want to help too", cried Nalin from the doorway. "Come on then", said Sumudu.

Shortly after 7.00 p.m. mother gently slid the key into the lock. Dropping her bag on the tattered chair, she sniffed the air and followed the delicious smell into the kitchen. She saw her three sons laughing as they worked together. The features of her face softened and her heart warmed as the love for them washed over her.

"Sit down mother. Everything is ready. Let's eat," said Sumudu pulling out a chair for mother.

After the dishes were washed, mother stood behind Sumudu as he sat at the kitchen table adding the last sentence to his essay.

"What is it about?" mother asked.

"It's about our life. Our family relationship."

Mother looked around the cheap furniture and the discoloured walls. Closing her eyes she thought about all the things she wished she could provide for her family, while a single tear slowly made its way down her cheeks.

"Mother why are you crying?"

"I'm sorry you don't have a lot in your life." Mother said.

"I have you and my brothers. I live in a home full of love. I wouldn't trade what we have for all the money in the world."

Pulling her son close she whispered, "Neither would I son. Neither would I."
